Glycerine Oil - 16 oz.

Glycerine acts as a binder, blender, stabilizer, and antifreeze when you mix it with glands. Glycerine can also be mixed with urines to add body and to prevent evaporation when exposed to the air and to prevent freezing. We personally like to use Glycerine in our urines for freeze proofing. Shake well after mixing. Glycerine will not preserve your glands or meat. Add some sodium benzoate to preserve your glands and baits.

Chained Super Stakes 12/pk

By far the best staking system that we've ever used. This Staking System has been used from the black dirt in Minnesota, to the red clay of north Georgia, Louisiana, and Texas to the sugar sand of the Georgia/Florida border, southern Texas, and the Carolina coast. A Fox Hollow Super Stake is attached to 16" of #2 straight link machine chain with a mighty hook, which is welded shut. Just attach your trap to the last link of chain with a 6 gauge J-Hook and Crunch Proof Swivel and you're good to go. When coyote trapping in black dirt we drive it down about 14". In red clay we put it down about 10" and in sand we run it down all 16". No more cable stubs sticking up in your trap bed. We have hundreds of these that have been used and reused hard for 8 seasons. When pulling, hook on the chain link below your swivel to avoid stressing the J-Hook.

This driver is heat treated and the tip will not mushroom when used by the hardest long liner. Works on both Original and Finned Super Stakes. Driver is a hair under 2 feet from tip to tip. This measurement includes the nut on top.

Trapping Tips and Information

The Dirt Hole Set

Step 1. Dig a hole about 4 inches in diameter and 8 inches deep at a 45-degree angle. If possible, dig under a small bunch of grass that can serve as a backing. A dried cow chip, coyote droppings, bone or small piece of rotten wood can be used for a backing if grass is not available.

Step 2. Place the trap 2 to 3 inches from the hole to figure out how large to dig the trap's bed. Set the trap aside, and dig another hole an inch or so below the level of the ground and wide enough for the trap and stakes. Level and smooth the trap bed.

Step 3. After placing the trap in the freshly dug hole, secure it by driving a stake through the attachment on the swivel. For the stake, use a 1/2 re-enforcing rod stake at least 24 inches long with a nut or washer welded to the top end. If the ground is rocky, it may be difficult to drive the stake into the ground. If so, substitute two 18-inch re-enforcing rod stakes and drive them in the ground at 45-degree angles with a Double Stake Swivel. This also works well with wet or loose soil.

Step 4. Once the stakes are driven into the ground, place enough loose soil to bed the trap and firmly twist it into the dirt. The trap should be about an inch below the level of the ground. Once the trap is bedded in the hole, install a pan cover to keep the dirt away from the springs. Pan covers should be porous so that moisture, but not dirt, passes through. Wire, Denim or other cloth materials and fiberglass screen work well. They should be clean and free of odors. Cut the cover to fit under the jaws and over the pan of the trap. A trap with a 6-inch jaw spread requires a pan cover that is 6 inches wide and 8 or 9 inches long. In one end, cut a slit for the trigger mechanism.

Step 5. Pack loose soil around the trap and over the ends of the pan cover that extend out from the jaws of the trap. Pack the soil firmly all around the outside of the trap to bed the trap securely. This keeps the trap from tipping if the coyote steps on the soil outside the trap. If the soil dug from the hole is too wet or too coarse to use, find drier soil along protected cutbanks, under fallen logs or hay bales, or in buildings with dirt floors.

Step 6. Once the trap is firmly bedded and the pan cover installed, sift 1/4 to 1/2 inch of dry dirt over the trap. Use a wood or metal sifter pan to screen out all coarse dirt, rocks and other debris from the trap covering. The trap will work smoothly through the sifted-dirt covering.

Step 7. To make a place for the coyote to step as it approaches to investigate the lure, create a saucer-like depression in the dirt over the trap. The depression should be sloped slightly toward the opening of the dirt hole. Arrange small pebbles or clods of dirt carefully around the trap to guide the coyote into the trap, but be careful that pebbles or clods are not in the way of the trap jaws. Because coyotes like to step on smooth soil, this arrangement of pebbles or clods in conjunction with the saucer-like depression over the trap will do more to guide a coyote to step into the trap than will actual placement of the trap in relation to the dirt hole or lure.

Step 8. The last step in making the dirt-hole set is to add bait, lure or scent. The combination of two or more coyote lures in the hole make the set more appealing to a coyote and is more effective than using just one. Tainted meat bait, such as the flesh of beaver, bobcat, cattle or skunk, is a popular lure used in a dirt hole, but they deteriorate in hot weather. Many trappers use commercially available lures, which are more convenient and less messy than meat bait.

Step 9. Use at least two coyote trapping lures / baits in the dirt hole. Place a ball of sheep wool in the bottom of the hole and pour the lures on it, or pour the lures directly on the bottom of the hole. After the lures are applied, roll up a wad of dried grass and place it in the hole. Then place coyote gland lure, coyote urine or red fox urine on the backing. Coyote droppings can be used along with the gland lure or urine. If two or more dirt-hole sets are made in a close area, use a different combination of lures at each set to give each trap set a different smell.

Step 10. The finished dirt-hole set should look like an animal has dug a hole and strung the dirt back in the process. The dirt-hole set is effective partly because of its visual appeal. It also works well in areas with some grassy cover where other types of sets would be less obvious. Coyotes are attracted to bare dirt or mounds of dirt like gopher mounds, mole hills and badger dens. The addition of extra dirt in a trap-set location can make the set more attractive.

Flat Set or Urined Post Set

Some of the most common flat sets are called “post sets” or “marker sets”. Fox and coyote are territorial animals and will lay claim to areas. If another animal comes into the area then they will chase them out of their territory. These animals will mark their territory by urinating on objects along their travel way. They will also leave droppings at the outer boundaries of their territory. Some examples of good areas for post sets are old farm roadways and trails.

For trap bedding instructions please see page 38 that reference the Dirt Hole Set. When bedding for a coyote remember to put the trap bed 4-7 inches farther back than that of the fox. You will want to make sure you blend your set with things in your areas like grass clipping. Remember fox generally will run in pairs so having two good sets in a location double your chances of a catch.

Lures: You will want to use a Gland Lure or Urine for post sets. You will not want to use a food lure in this type of set since it will be considered unnatural. When using the gland lure place it at the base or a few inches up the post. You will only need to use 3-5 drops of gland lure. If you use a urine use a squeeze bottle and squirt about 1 oz. of urine on the post. If you have some tall grass in the area you can squirt a small amount there also. You will have better luck if you use either a gland lure or urine at each set not both.

Posts: You can use many things as a good post such as: Charred Piece of Wood, Rocks, Old Logs, Clump of Grass Backing, Stump or Mound of Dirt.

Snaring Tips

Snare Set In A Hole Under A Livestock Fence

Snares designed to capture furbearers by the neck or leg are set directly in the center of the animal's movement path. Snares usually are held in an animal's movement path with one of several different support systems. One support that works particularly well can be constructed from a 36-inch piece of 11-12-gauge galvanized or 9-gauge soft wire. A “V” bend is made in the support wire about 4 inches from the end and driven into the ground with a notched rod to prevent the support from moving in the wind. The snare is wrapped around the support about three times and held in place by a “U” configuration formed in the upper end of the snare support. Bend the snare cable upward slightly, just inside the lock, so the snare loop is not closed by the wind (see Figure 1).

Attach snares to a solid object so captured animals cannot escape. A steel 1/2-inch diameter rebar, 24 to 30 inches long (depending on soil hardness), makes a good anchor. Attach snares to the rebar with a strong swivel to prevent tangling and breaking. Use a lead cable that is at least as strong as the snare cable to attach short snares to the rebar stake. Avoid using 9-gauge wire or several strands of 14-gauge wire to anchor snares to a rebar stake because they may bend back and forth, crystallize, and break. When used for beaver, snares also can be secured to a tree that is at least 6 inches in diameter or to the base of a large shrub such as a willow.

Snares set in holes under woven wire fences should be held in place about 1 to 2 inches from the fence with the snare support system described in Figure 1. The top of the snare can be as high as 3 inches above the bottom wire of the fence. Set the snare far enough away from the fence to prevent the lock from catching on the bottom wire of the fence. Hold the snares in place by clipping them to the bottom wire of the fence with a fine U-shaped wire such as a 1 1/2-inch piece of a paper clip that allows the snare to easily release. The bottom of the loop should be about 2 inches above the bottom of the hole or coyotes and foxes may be caught by a front leg. With either of the above snare support systems, anchor the snares to the heavy-gauge wire on the bottom of the fence. The upper wires on a woven wire fence usually are too weak to secure a snare.

Snares occasionally are placed in the field but left unset for one to two weeks. This placement allows trappers to quickly set snares when pelts become prime and reduces human scent at the site. Snares usually are set in the form of a round or oval loop. A round loop that is 12 inches in diameter can form an oval loop that is about 14 inches high and 10 inches wide. The following round loop diameters and heights above ground are recommended when snaring furbearers (Table 1). A 5/64- or 3/32-inch diameter galvanized aircraft cable is recommended for snaring coyotes, beaver, and raccoons. Foxes and bobcats can be captured in 1/16- to 3/32-inch-diameter snares.

How To Dye Traps

We get many questions about how to dye your traps and have put together this article in hopes that it will answer any questions you might have. In this article we used two different methods of dyeing traps. We used the Cold Dye method and the Traditional Dye method using boiling water. Both methods work well it just depends and whichever you prefer. Here are the steps you will need to take to dye your traps:

1. You will need to wash your traps with a degreaser of some type or lye to remove all the oil and grease that is on the trap out of the box. If you are using rusty traps then take a steel wire brush to them very lightly.
2. Take your traps outside and leave them exposed for a week or two to get a light coat of rust on them. If they are not rusting fast enough you can spray them with vinegar to speed up the process.
3. Before dipping traps in dye solution make sure you put a nail or stick in between the jaws to hold them open.
4. Cold Dye Method: Take your trap dye and mix with water in a bucket or container of some type. Put your traps in the container and leave for a few days. Once the desired color is obtained remove your traps and hang to dry. The benefit of this method is that you do not have to build a fire and watch it for an hour.
4. Traditional Method: Add your dye ( 1 Pack per 6 gallons of water) to your container. Bring your water to a rolling boil. Make sure you have a heat brick/stone on the bottom of the container so that the traps do not rest on the bottom. Let water temperature come down to a simmer and then put your traps in. Make sure you have a wire attached to make it easier to remove. Allow traps to seat for 30 mins to 1 hour. I would check them until you get the desired color.

5. Once desired color is obtained simply remove your traps and hang them up to dry.

Note: Dying traps helps seal the trap so you do not have to deal with rust in the future. As with any piece of equipment if you want to keep it for an extended period of time and have it work properly then you do not need it to be rusty. Rust will slow your traps down and they will not last as long.

How To Wax Traps

We get many calls about waxing traps and I have put together this article in hopes that it will answer any questions you might have. In this article we used two different methods of waxing traps. We used the Double Boiler Method System and the Traditional Method of using your existing logwood solution. Both methods work well it just depends and whichever you prefer.

Benefits of Waxing Traps: Waxing your traps will help keep the odor of the dye down to a minimal level so not to spook off any wary target animals, it will also help speed your trap up and it will operate much smoother. Waxing traps will help protect your traps when you are using any antifreeze or salt that would cause corrosion to the trap.

Choosing Trap Wax: When choosing a trap wax make sure that you get a trap wax that has no beeswax in it. The beeswax will cause the wax on your trap to harden and chip in cold conditions. If you are using the Double Boiler Method then you will need 5-10 lbs. of wax. The traditional method you can use the 1 lbs. bar of wax.

Trap Dye: You will need to make sure you have dyed your traps. Instructions on Dyeing your traps can be found on our previous page.

1. Double Boiler Method: If you decide to use the double boiler method you will need a heat source ( I used a Fry Daddy Stand), 2 Pots ( 1 smaller than the other so it can fit inside with about 1-2 inch apart), small spacer (to put in the bottom of the 1st pot so the 2nd pot doesn't sit directly on the bottom) and Wax.

The reason behind using two pots and boiling water is so that your wax does not heat up till the point of catching fire. Wax is very flammable and it has a low flash point. By heating the wax up with the boiling water you know that the wax will never reach its flash point and catch fire. Water Boils at 212 degrees. The flash point of wax can range from 250 to 400 degrees.

2. Before dipping traps in dye solution make sure you put a nail or stick in between the jaws to hold them open.

3. Once you have your wax at a liquid state then you can dip your trap in the wax. I would leave the trap in the wax for 1-2 minutes then take your trap out and hang it up to cool off.

1. Traditional Method Using Existing Logwood Solution You have your logwood solution already heated up so you can place a bar of wax in the solution and let it melt. At that point just dip your traps in the solution and pull your traps back through the wax that should be sitting on top of the water (wax floats on water even in liquid form)

2. Before dipping traps in dye solution make sure you put a nail or stick in between the jaws to hold them open.

3. Once you have your traps hung up and cooled off then you can place them in a container with leaves and your all done !

Body Trap Setting Instructions

Body Trap Setting Instructions

1. Generally the smaller body grip traps can be set by hand such as the #110, #120 and #155. Simply extend spring away from jaws of the trap. Then compress spring with hand.

2. If using a larger body grip trap then we recommend using a Set Tool to compress the springs. 110 - 220 Traps use Standard Set Tool 24" - 330 Traps use HD Set Tool 30"

3. When spring is compressed set the safety hook. Repeat step for opposite spring.

4. While the springs are compressed, bring the trap jaws together.

5. Place the dog into the notch of the trigger.

Caution: The trap is now fully set. Ensure that the safety hooks remain in place when placing trap in position.

Body Trap Sets

When setting Body Traps you will need to set your trap upright and place a stake/stick on each side to hold it up. We recommend placing it in a well traveled path. You will also need to make sure you secure the trap to a stake or tree using wire.

There are many other sets for various other animals, these are just a few. For more information we recommend getting a DVD or Book by one of our great trappers.

Note: Please consult your state/local trapping regulations on using body traps on land and water. DO NOT use body traps in areas where there are pets.

Dog Proof Trap Setting Instructions

Setting Instructions

You will NOT need to dye or wax Fleming dog proof raccoon traps. They are painted or galvanized so they will not rust.

Fleming Dog Proof Raccoon Traps are designed so you can set them by hand or with the Dog Proof Set Tool.

To set the trap by hand simply place your hands on the Hand Guard and press spring down. Flip the dog over and attach it in the notch on the trigger. Release the pressure on the hand guard and you are ready to go.

To set the trap with the Set Tool simply place tool under the spring (tool has notches to make it easier) and press spring down. Flip the dog over and attach it in the notch on the trigger. Release the pressure on the set tool, remove the tool and you are ready to go.

NOTE: If for any reason the trigger is very sensitive take a file and file the end of the dog to remove the paint and rough it up. This will make it less sensitive.

Fleming Dog Proof Raccoon Traps

The Fleming Dog Proof Raccoon Trap features a fully enclosed dog proof design with powerful double coil springs, a pull only trigger system, hand guard for setting the trap and a straight spade staking system. NEW - Galvanized Trap Shown

The hand guard is designed to help you set the trap without using a set tool. The Dog Proof Trap Set Tool is also great to have in your trappers pack since the springs are very strong and if you set very many traps this will help.

The trap is fired when the raccoon reaches in for your bait, and instead grabs the trigger, firing the trap. The trigger can only be fired by the raccoon pulling on the trigger. A pull only trigger helps prevent unwanted catches or rodents accidentally firing the trigger. When baiting Dog Proof Coon Traps; apply the lure or bait to a cotton ball or sheep's wool. Place below the trigger so the raccoon has to reach past the trigger to get the bait.
